about the artist:

ERIC MAURICE WALKER, II, illustrator, muralist, and fine artist has been creating visionary experiences since childhood. A native of Southern California, Walker was born in Los Angeles, California, where he first started sketching images of family members and drawing landscapes. When the family moved to Philadelphia, he learned to appreciate the art and culture of one's environment. He began excelling in self-expression with music in the saxophone. Yet, his artistic experiments did not stop there. "My responsibility is to personify God's voice, and remain true to the ability to visualize what others feel inside."

Following high school, Walker earned his Bachelor's degree from Millersville University of Pennsylvania, where he also received a minor African-American Studies. It was there where he excelled in a variety of platforms, including sculpture, oil, acrylic, charcoal, airbrush, colored-pencil, print and web design. "Illustration and computer imaging are my platforms for production. By hand illustrators create the perfect ability to depict the natural essence of art."

After college, Walker began EMUDESIGNS as a vehicle for bridging both his illustrative and graphic art sensibilities. He began building brand campaigns sought by clients within the communication and entertainment industries. After serving as designer for companies throughout the Philadelphia area, Walker returned to Los Angeles to continue his exploration for creative expression.

Followers of his compositions credit his sensibility to create personable and realistic renderings. Walker's strength lies in the detail. "I aim for faithful representation by way of skillfully executed composition. My expressions charge the viewer to consider one's position in the environment by contributing to the growth around us. My role as an artist is creating visual images embracing self identity through aesthetic compositions."
